Text-1: Istanbul - an old city

Istanbul is beautiful to look at and great fun. It is noisy, with many people shouting as they sell things in the streets. Istanbul people love flowers and are very friendly towards visitors. Istanbul is a place full of contrasts, a mixture of old and new. There are lovely, quiet palaces and museums but there's a lot of noise inside the famous Covered Bazaar and in the tiny, crowded, busy alleys such as Flower Sellers' Alley. The rush-hour traffic can be terrifying. Like so many modern cities, Istanbul is much polluted and has a lot of traffic problems. It is certainly a dirty city, but beautiful at the same time. When you look across the bridge to old Stamboul, you see an extraordinary skyline with mosques and minarets, and you know you are standing, in fact, at the doorway to Asia. Things are happening, and the atmosphere is very exciting. It seems that when you visit this city, you can't forget it!

59. Visitors think Istanbul people
 a) make problems for visitors
 b) help visitors
 c) drive fast
 d) eat in streets
60. According to the passage,shout when they sell things.

Torquay ? But I said Turkey !

Kumiko Tsuchida is a Japanese professor and she works at Istanbul University. She had a good time, and after a few days she packed her suitcase, checked out of the hotel, and set off to catch her flight back to Istanbul.

At Paddington station she couldn't find the train to the airport, so she asked a railway guard. Mrs Tsuchida doesn't speak very much English, and when she said 'Turkey', the guard thought that she said 'Torquay', a seaside town in southwest England. So he directed her to the platform for the 8.15 train to Torquay.

Mrs Tsuchida got on the train and found a seat. The journey seemed very long, but when she asked the other passengers 'Turkey?' they all said yes, she was on the right train for Torquay.

She arrived in the seaside town just after midnight, but when she got off the train, she didn't recognize anything. She didn't know where she was. She didn't have any English money and she was very frightened.

Two hours later, the police found her. They provided a bed for her for the night and the next morning they phoned the Japanese Embassy. The embassy sorted out the problem. Then Mrs Tsuchida got the train back to London, took a taxi to Heathrow airport, and caught another flight to Istanbul.

Before she left, she spoke to our reporter through an interpreter, 'I said Turkey, Turkey', but people didn't understand my pronunciation and they thought I said 'Torquay'. But I enjoyed my visit and English people are very helpful and kind.'

66. The following day,.....

- a) the police found and helped her.
- b) she flew to Turkey.
- c) she phoned the police and told them the story.
- d) the police helped her but the Japanese Embassy didn't listen to her

Text-3:

A STUDENT BUDGET

College gives people the chance to learn and make friendships that will last a lifetime. Many people in North America begin college at the age of 18. Many students go to school and work part-time to help pay for their education.

In the US, the cost of a college education can be quite expensive. Undergraduate education at a public university can cost between $2,000 and $10,000 a year. That amount rises to between $14,000 and $24,000 a year at a private university. Students must also pay for textbooks and stationery. These can cost $500 to $800 per year. Students who live in campus housing pay between $3,500 and $9,000 per year for room and board. Add money for clothes, travel and other personal expenses, and one year at a university can cost as much as $35,000!

Students need to spend their money carefully. At Eastern Michigan University, advisors help students to plan and stick to a budget. They suggest this: At the start of a school semester, write down your income, for example, money you will get from your family or a part-time job. Then, list all of your expenses. Put your expenses into two groups: those that change (food, phone, books, and travel) and those that will stay the same (education, room and board). Add together all of your expenses. Then, subtract these from your income. Do you have enough money or do you need more?

Learning to stick a budget is not always easy. But for many, it is easier than borrowing money from family or friends in the middle of a semester.

67. Many students in North America to help pay for their college education.
